Synopsis

I am building a career as an academic, researcher, and educator who is dedicated to improving the lives of animals, including the humans who care for them. In addition to my bioscience research portfolio, I have expertise in qualitative research methods. Namely, thematic discourse analysis, narrative analysis, content analysis, and multispecies ethnography. Since 2020, I have published 21 peer-reviewed articles and book chapters in the field of human-animal studies. I also have training in quantitative social science methodologies, and work independently, as part of a team, or as a team leader. My current research interests include more-than-human cultures, urban animals, domestication, multispecies families, griefwork, and animals in tourism, with a focus on cats (Felis catus). Furthermore, I have experience and enthusiasm for organising academic events, outreach initiatives, and engaging with a range of audiences and stakeholders. I enjoy mentoring and supervising project students and am keen to develop teaching materials and course content related to human-animal studies.
